

Russell Curr

Using a camera Russell gives meaning to his view of life and the world we all inhabit. He views the world as a wonderful, beautiful, mysterious and deeply inspiring place. Its transient nature can at once be both a source of deep sadness and profound wonderment that we have this brief moment of life to experience it. Russell hopes with his photos he can convey some of this wonder, fragility and beauty of what he experiences.

Russell Curr has no formal training in photography but has been taking photos since the early 1970's. His focus is on minimalist landscape environments and often those areas where our farming practices have overwhelmed the natural environment. For over 40 years he has journeyed into wilderness areas with a special emphasis over the past 4 years on the Australian desert regions.

He has been in a number of group shows since 2013 with his first solo show in 2017.
