

Nature has always been my greatest source of inspiration. As a mother of 2 beautiful daughters and living on the outskirts of Amsterdam, I often worry about the environment and the future of nature. I am lucky that we have a garden and that I can still enjoy the beauty and diversity that nature offers us every day. I would like to share the beauty that I see in the hope that people will become more aware of all the wonderful colours and forms in little things and in the enormous values of nature. I started my art education at a very young age and after years of making art creating awareness has become more and more important to me.
