Steve Light “SLART” Bio

I love losing myself in my art, it's all I did as a child, draw and play video games. I enjoyed being with a few close friends but enjoyed drawing alone the most.

I started creating art again two years ago, after many years avoiding it due to a discouraging A-level Art teacher, Ce la vie! I have been selling my work and producing more than ever now, so I don't have any regrets. I've got a load more to share now through my art, due to life experiences over the last two decades.

My art is focused around people, emotions and observations about life and death. I believe that we can find freedom by staring death in the face and it need not be feared. Citiscapes also inspire me and I sometimes feel moved to paint them. I have been told that my drawing style can be a bit like David Hockney and my favourite medium is brush pens and acrylic paints.
